Prepare to embark on an enthralling journey through the annals of West Africa, where the intricate interplay of race, religion, and politics has shaped the region's destiny for centuries. 'History of Race in Muslim West Africa 1600-1960' is a groundbreaking work that unveils the profound complexities and enduring legacies of racial dynamics in this vibrant part of the world.

Unveiling the Origins of Racial Hierarchies

Our exploration begins at the dawn of the 17th century, as we trace the emergence of racial hierarchies in Muslim West Africa. You will witness firsthand the establishment of social and political systems that classified individuals based on their perceived racial background. Delve into the factors that influenced these classifications, including ethnic origins, physical appearance, and religious affiliation.

Examining the Rise of Slave Societies

Tragically, the history of West Africa is intertwined with the horrors of slavery. This work sheds light on the rise of slave societies and the devastating impact they had on the region. You will learn about the trans-Saharan and trans-Atlantic slave trade, its economic and social consequences, and the resistance movements that emerged in response to this abhorrent practice.

Exploring the Struggles for Equality and Justice

Despite the challenges, the people of West Africa have never ceased in their quest for equality and justice. This book chronicles the valiant struggles of individuals and communities who fought against racial discrimination, colonialism, and post-colonial inequality. You will be inspired by their resilience, their determination, and their unwavering belief in a better future.
