A Structured Approach to Opening Mastery

Focused Approach to Studying Chess Openings takes a structured approach to opening mastery, guiding you through four essential pillars:

1. Understanding Fundamental Principles

* Master the key concepts of opening strategy, such as controlling the center, developing pieces, and creating pawn structures.

2. In-Depth Opening Analysis

* Explore a comprehensive analysis of the most important chess openings, including the Ruy Lopez, Sicilian, Queen's Gambit, and more.

In depth analysis of film opening sequences in order to identify the key conventions and tools by which these conventions are established

In order for us as a group to establish the conventions of opening sequences, each of us had to analyse film from a range of genres. By doing this, we were able to establish that across all films there are common elements within the first few minutes of a film. I analysed five films from a couple of genres which were: Batman Begins, Forest Gump, Batman the Dark Knight Rises, American Gangster and Now You see Me. From my analysis, I found that the following conventions were filmed

- Start with a big event e.g. in 'Batman The Dark Knight' when the Joker rots the bank
- Establish the scene and settings
- Introduction of the main character in the opening minutes for example in 'American Gangster' the main character is introduced in an alleyway torturing someone trying to get information out of him and ending up killing the man.
- Soundtrack - This is the use of tone, volume, and tempo, which will generically start quiet and slow-paced but in some films it starts energetic and encodes info to the audience (the mood)
- Flashbacks - A scene where the narrative goes back in time. This is usually a key event for a couple of minutes that establishes key information.

However, in order for us to create our own effective opening sequences within a specific genre, we needed to analyse, look deeper and identify the specific genre conventions that exist but gain expertise and have good understanding of the tools being used by the director to convey a meaning and why he/she used these conventions. For our research, we chose to analyse four film openings within our specific genre, which was action-comedy. We chose this genre for a couple of reasons: firstly because it is common for director to establish the narrative and characters within a couple of a minutes instead of using the whole film which is an approach in the romance genre. For our analysis, we chose to look at the opening credits and titles of the films Bad Boys, Hot Fuzz, 21 Jump Street and Men in Black II, which we then analysed and annotated. From our in depth analysis and group discussion we were able to establish the main conventions:

- Introduce the main character(s)
- Establish the narrative
- Opening credits and titles are linked to the narrative
- Set the mood/atmosphere
- Establish the genre

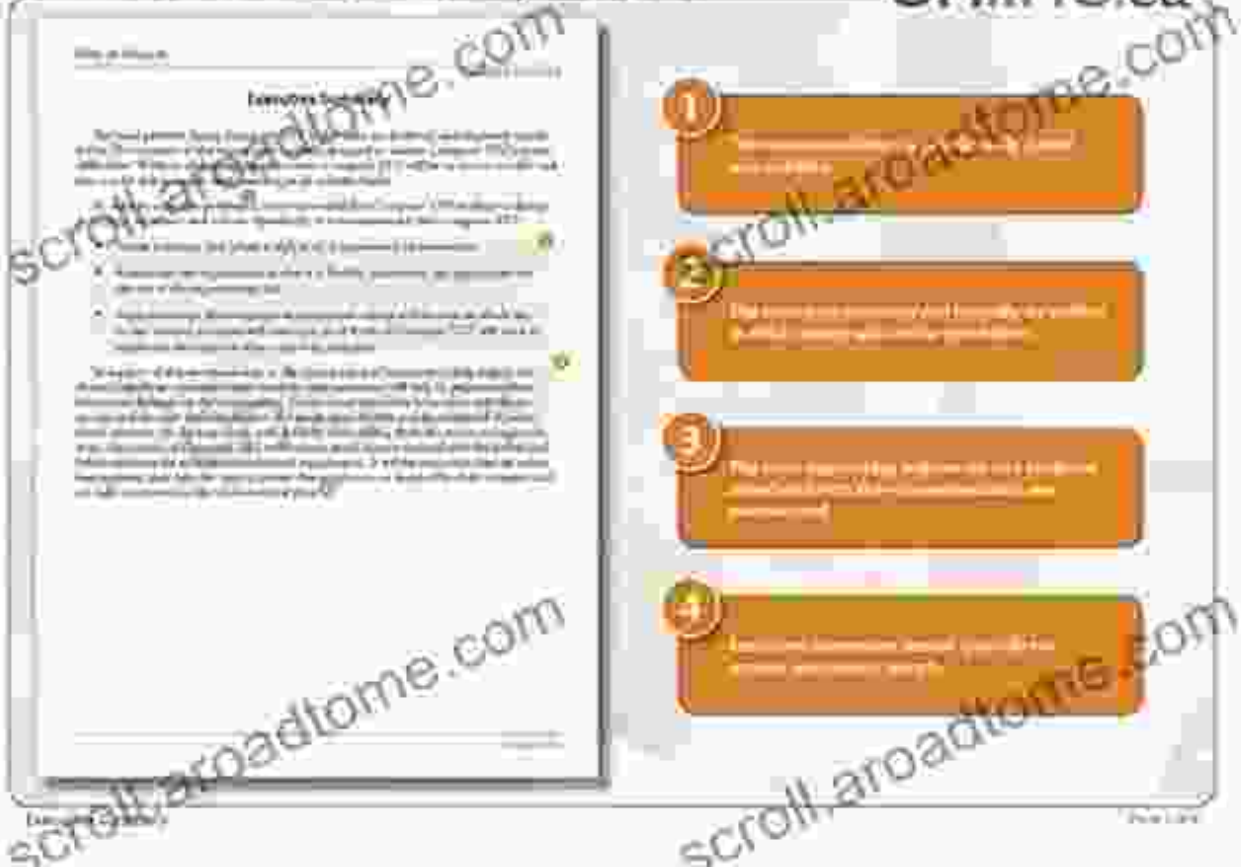

These conventions have been established in similar way across the films within our genre; this is in order for the audience to establish the narrative and genre in only 1-2 minutes. For example in '21 Jump Street' the director established the narrative via the use of font which in the opening credits and titles. The red and blue colour schema was the link that connoted that the
