The war began in 1853 when Russia invaded the Ottoman-controlled Danubian Principalities. In response, France and the United Kingdom declared war on Russia. Sardinia joined the alliance in 1855.

The war was fought primarily in the Crimean Peninsula. The allies landed at Eupatoria in September 1854 and marched on Sevastopol, the main Russian naval base in the Black Sea. The siege of Sevastopol lasted for eleven months and resulted in the deaths of tens of thousands of soldiers.
