Unveiling the Weight of Eternal Glory

At the heart of 'Weight of Glory' lies the exploration of what Lewis refers to as the "weight of glory." He posits that within each human soul resides a longing for something greater than ourselves, a yearning for a fulfillment that transcends the limitations of our mortal existence.

Lewis eloquently describes this longing as a weight, a sense of dissatisfaction that lingers beneath the surface of our everyday lives. He writes:

> "It is not in our power to take the first step, but we can prepare ourselves to take it when the signal is given. What we can do is to make the weight as heavy as possible; to long for the coming of the Hero-King in every fiber of our being."

The transformative Power of Redemption

Intertwined with the concept of eternal glory is the transformative power of redemption. Lewis asserts that through the sacrifice of Jesus Christ, we are offered the opportunity to be reconciled with God and to experience the fullness of His glory.

He writes:

> "The world is a sphere of souls each of which has a destiny in heaven or hell. The life you now live on earth is only a preparation for the life that is to come...Either you will go to heaven or you will go to hell. And you will go to one or the other not because of what you have done or failed to do in this life, but because of the condition of your soul."

A Call to Embrace the Heavenly Journey

'Weight of Glory' serves as a clarion call to embrace the heavenly journey that lies before us. Lewis urges readers to set their sights on the eternal and to live their lives in such a way that they are prepared for the glory that awaits them.

He writes:

> "It is a serious thing to live in a society of possible gods and goddesses, to remember that the dullest and most uninteresting person you talk to may one day be a creature which, if you saw it now, you would be strongly tempted to worship, or else a horror and a corruption such as you now meet, if at all, only in a nightmare. All day long we are in some degree helping each other to one or other of these destinations."
